

Australian National University

PUBLIC LECTURE

Lessons for Europe on the interdependence of asylum law

Monday 24 September 6 pm

Speakers

Dr Daniel Ghezelbash

Senior Lecturer, Macquarie Law School and Director of the Macquarie University Social Justice Clinic

Location

Law Theatre

ANU College of Law, 5 Fellows Road,
The Australian National University

Registration required

W eventbrite.com.au/e/lessons-for-europe-on-the-interdependence-of-asylum-law-tickets-50107050537
E marketing.law@anu.edu.au

This lecture is free and open to the public

Upcoming ANU Law events:
law.anu.edu.au/news-and-events/upcoming-events

In August, Italy's Deputy Prime Minister explicitly stated that the country should follow Australia's 'Operation Sovereign Borders' policy of not allowing asylum seekers who arrive by boat to enter Australia and apply for protection visas. This statement and other policy developments in recent times in Europe's changing response to the migrants crossing the Mediterranean Sea, raises questions once again about the interdependent nature of asylum laws around the world.

Dr Daniel Ghezelbash, author of Refuge Lost: Asylum Law in an Interdependent World (CUP, 2018), will discuss Australia's model of refugee law and policy within an international context, focusing on recent developments in Europe and the potential limitations – and dangers – of the adoption of these policies.

This talk was organised by the ANU Law Students for Refugees group within the ANU College of Law's Law Reform and Social Justice program, in partnership with the ANU Centre for European Studies.

Policy, Politics, Culture: EU Migration and Integration (PPCEUMI) is focused on the study of third-country migrant integration in the EU through the lenses of politics, policy, governance, and culture. Policy- and solution-oriented, PPCEUMI focuses on the immediate period of pre-and point of arrival of migrants, as well as considering the longer-term process of integration. This Jean Monnet network of 5 partner institutions operates with the support of the Erasmus+ Programme of the European Union.

Presented by Law Reform &

Social Justice

ANU College of Law

ANU Centre for European Studies

Jean Monnet Network: Policy, Politics, Culture: EU Migration & Integration (PPCEUMI)